

09647

Searching for text of a computer program is facilitated by targeting the search. The targeted search includes selecting one or more items associated with the computer program in which to search for the text. Items not associated with the computer program are not selected. Further, the targeted search includes choosing specific locations associated with the computer program within which the items to be searched are to be located. The items and/or locations are selected based on program specific rules.